What Can I Do With a Major in Accounting?

Accounting involves the examination, organization, management and design of accurate recording and reporting procedures of financial and business transactions. Some major specializations include public accounting, tax accounting, cost accounting, government accounting, budget accounting and internal auditing.

The Accounting major provides a foundation for careers in a variety of fields including Public Accounting Firms, Private Accounting Firms, Corporate Accounting, Banking and Lending Organizations.

While many accounting graduates will pursue careers in the private sector, others will find jobs in government agencies and non-profit organizations or go directly to graduate school. Regardless of your career choices, increase your marketability through internships, responsible work experience, good grades, and involvement in college activities.
