The Rutgers University–Camden Class of 2020 graduates are poised to make a positive, meaningful impact on the world; in fact, they already have. Rutgers–Camden graduates have benefited from the innovative curriculum and rigorous experiential learning opportunities that they received on and off campus, and they leave with a depth of knowledge that’s informed not just by lectures and textbooks but by real-world situations with real-world results. They graduate ready to turn their robust, hands-on experiences into both employment and further academic scholarship. Whether in corporate, not-for-profit, or government industries, the head start they got here at Rutgers–Camden will last throughout their careers.

“During what was a very rough year, navigating the job market and figuring out what I really wanted to do, it was nice to know I could fall back on the people of Rutgers-Camden. I genuinely don’t think I would have gotten that at a bigger school.”

–Samuel Tuero, ’20, B.A., political science

“You get so many opportunities to connect with your professors. I think that was helpful to me, because I was able to talk to my professors and get letters of recommendation much easier than I would have at a big school, and because they know me personally my letters of recommendation were much stronger.”

–Trinh Nguyen, ’20, B.S., biology/biological sciences
